Woodward School for Girls

Dedication

For the principles for which it stands, the ideals enshrined therein, the pleasant memories it recalls, the friendships it has fostered, and the knowledge with which it has provided us academically, morally, and socially for meeting life's struggles, we dedicate this yearbook to Woodward School for Girls.

Class History

In September, 1951, twenty shy, apprehensive young girls entered the seventh grade at Woodward School for Girls. We were greeted at the door by two "mighty" seniors. Miss Roberts, our homeroom teacher, had quite a time helping us through our first initiation period. After a seemingly interminable time, during which we wore brilliant-colored ribbons on our wrists and ankles, the final initiation ceremony took place, and we felt as though we belonged to the Woodward family.

Our seventh grade president was Carol Stengel. Under her leadership we ventured into the world of financial matters; in other words, we wished to make money. Our first project was selling glove holders and coasters. As seventh graders we were very fortunate to have a few of our classmates participate in the operetta Chonita. The way we acted someone might have thought we were in a Broadway production. Other firsts for this year included the Father and Daughter Banquet, Founder's Night, the Spring Tea, the School Picnic at Foxboro, and finally, Graduation. We had survived our first year at Woodward and looked forward to the next five years.

The next fall we found ourselves in Mrs. Hall's homeroom, where we had acquired a new classmate. Barbara Fornell was our new president and had quite a time trying to enforce Parliamentary Procedure. Our most successful project was selling magazine subscriptions. We were so dedicated to this project that, upon meeting a friend, instead of asking, "How are you?" we asked, "Would you like to buy a subscription?" Also during this year we came out of our shells and were quite often heard from, especially when the teachers wished us to be quiet.

Again we were fortunate to have some of our classmates in the school plays: Happy Journey, Spreading the News, and Ici on Parle Francais. After the plays we attended our second Father and Daughter Banquet, the Spring Tea, and the School Picnic. Graduation followed, and we were happy to become freshmen.

In September we returned to Woodward, feeling very sophisticated because we were now in High School. Carla Nobili was our president; and Mrs. Millard, our homeroom teacher, spent many exasperating moments trying to subdue our exuberant spirits. We continued selling magazines; in addition, during the Christmas and Easter holidays we sold candles in various shapes and sizes.

One day a few of the members of our class heard a trip to New York advertised on the radio. Someone got the bright idea that our class should go. As it turned out, seven members of our class, with Dr. and Mrs. Nobili and Mr. and Mrs. Sloane as chaperones, went to New York. While there, many of us for the first time, we saw a TV show with many of the popular performers of the time. We arrived home at one o'clock on Monday morning, but only Dana and Carol showed up at school that day.

After we had suffered through our first two-hour midyear exams, we decided to have a Class Day. All were to dress as little girls with knee socks, short skirts, blouses, and hats, and everyone was to carry a lollypop. April first was the date. Naturally it snowed --Woodward Weather--but that didn't stop the ambitious ninth grade. The teachers were not very pleased with our appearance nor with our "all-day suckers." During lunch-time we spread skunk cabbage throughout our homeroom. We also decided to build a snow woman--no men allowed. Mrs. Millard never did get a chance to see our lovely four-foot woman, however, as we were compelled to take her apart before our next class. The only visible remainder of her was a stain on the classroom floor.

Several girls, feeling the need of a little excitement, decided to go to the Circus. We all had fun, despite the fact that we got lost; and when we finally did get on the right train for home, Carla's chameleon got loose, causing a near panic. After the Father and Daughter Banquet and the Spring Tea, came Graduation, and we were Sophomores.

Linda Sloane was our president that year, and Mrs. Blake our homeroom teacher. We were so noisy that Miss Bacon threatened to put us downstairs if we were not careful. During the winter we sometimes indulged in snowball fights--through the windows. Our main project was the selling of records. This proved to be a bit confusing, but very profitable. At the end of the year our class was invited to attend the Junior Prom. Those who went enjoyed themselves very much. With Graduation we became Juniors.

We were in Mrs. Leighton's homeroom, with Hildegarde Gillis as our president. Sheila had received her license to drive, and soon Linda also received hers. We sold ribbon candy and school pins, and collected papers. All our projects proved very successful, although the paper drive was quite tiring.

In the spring the Fathers' Club sponsored a dance, which three members of our class attended. After the dance we began preparing for the Pops Concert. We went to Wollaston Beach, where we collected a trunk full of rocks to be used in decorating the assembly hall. We also spent hours making flowers for the flowering trees.

During the year several of our classmates seemed to be busy in the Music Room at lunch time, rehearsing a special number, I suppose. On Founder's Night we were very much pleased to find that a member of our class, Dana Mills, had been admitted to the National Honor Society. We were invited to attend the Senior Prom at the Hotel Somerset, and finally at Graduation we became Seniors. It was hard to believe that time had finally come. We realized it fully only after Miss Bacon asked us if we wanted cream or white gowns for our own graduation.

In the fall we returned eagerly to make ourselves at home in the Senior Room. Miss Hurlbert was our homeroom teacher, and Maureen Mulhall our president. We began plans for initiation and, with much delight, gave the Seventh Graders a fairly "rough time." Again our projects were ribbon candy and another paper drive, which, though not so successful as the first one, was twice as tiring.

We attended Founder's Night and were very proud when several of our classmates won awards for outstanding achievements in history and science. We are now looking forward with anticipation to our Class Trip in April, our Senior Prom, our Farewell Chapel, and finally, the ultimate goal of our high school days, Graduation on June 10.

When we leave the School, diplomas in hand, we shall be taking with us not only a scroll which states that we have graduated, but also memories of a wonderful school which has taught us so much, brought us so many lasting friendships, and given us a good foundation which will enable us better to cope with the years that lie ahead.

BROTHERHOOD THROUGHCUT THE YEAR

When the subject of "Brotherhood Throughout the Year" was first suggested to me, the best example I could choose was my school life at Woodward. It is a pleasure and a heart-warming experience to see the way in which everyone cooperates with the other, regardless of race, religion, or creed. When there is a job to be done, we all work together, each doing her best, until we have a finished product of which we can all be proud.

An example of true brotherhood in the School is the Junior Red Cross. This organization does wonderful work all over the world, and its chief concern is helping others when they need it, in time of floods, tornadoes, hurricanes, and war. The Junior Red Cross has accomplished many things during the years I have been at Woodward. We have had a clothing drive for Korean children, and made favors to brighten the holidays of wounded veterans. We have made scrapbooks of our activities to send to students in other countries, and have received some in return, showing us how young people there spend their time.

Many others have devoted countless hours to Red Cross activities, more from a sense of thanksgiving because they are luckier than some and wish to help them, than because they are forced to do it.

We display a sense of brotherhood when we have elections. The girl for whom we vote, and perhaps help to elect, is selected, not for her beliefs or race, but because we have voted for the one whom we feel is the most capable of doing the job.

I have realized that in my years at Woodward I have learned a great deal about the other religions. My classmates and I have often indulged in discussions of religion. We have each gained something valuable from these discussions because we are able to understand a little the different concepts of the religions.

In summarizing, I might say that Faith, Hope, and Charity could be used as slogans for the peoples of the world: Faith being the three faiths working together; Hope being the desire for universal peace; and Charity being good-will to all, regardless of race, religion, or creed.

--Hildegarde Gillis

Class Will

We, the Graduating Class of 1957 of the Woodward School for Girls of Quincy in the county of Norfolk and the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, being of some body and no mind, do hereby make, publish and declare this, our last will and testament, hereby revoking any and all wills by us at any time heretofore made. Knowing that we are about to depart from these hallowed halls of learning, we hope that our successors will profit by the results of our experiences.

We give, devise, and bequeath to:

Miss Bacon--Book covers for all her English books.

Mrs. Millard--A Senior math class that doesn't have to take a final exam.

Mrs. Leighton--A supply of her three favorite products.

Miss Hurlbert--A Senior Class that gets into the homeroom on time every day.

Mrs. Blake-- A little elf to wipe off the tables in the lunchroom.

Miss Dyas--Students who don't try to blow up the School.

Miss Cole--A life-time supply of scissors.

Mrs. Lennon--More students like Roberta and Jackie.

Mrs. Schuerfeld--A Glee Club as obedient as Jeanne d'Arc's!

Mrs. Halloran--A school in which everyone buys the hot dish.

Mr. Mac--Our love and thanks for having been such a wonderful friend to us.

To the Woodward Student Body, we devise and denote the following items:

Diana Bates leaves--All her "steady" boy friends to future generations.

Barbara Burke leaves--The United States Navy with the exception of Tommy.

Carol Cooperstein leaves--The dust pan and brush for cleaning the Senior Room to the Juniors.

Brenda Curry leaves--Her great height to her sister.

Hildegarde Gillis leaves--All her wonderful math marks to future mathematicians.

Jacqueline Gordon leaves--Her appetite to girls who wish to lose weight.

Dana Mills leaves--All her bird trips to stay-at-homes.

Maureen Mulhall leaves--All her admittance slips to future late comers.

Patricia Prior leaves--Her quietness to Leslie Jarvelin.

Roberta Rappaport leaves--Her wardrobe to Venus.

Sheila Rubinovitz leaves--Her temper to meek people.

Linda Sloan leaves--Her Palmer method of handwriting to future teachers.

In witness thereof, we hereunto sign this our last will, contained on these pages, this tenth day of March in the year one thousand nine hundred and fifty-seven.

Signed, published, and declared by the said Class of 1957 as its last will and testament in the presence of us, who, in their presence and in the presence of each other heretofore subscribe our names as witnesses.

Class Prophecy

As I sit here comtemplating the future, I wonder if my classmates will be as I have pictured them. I'll admit I'm not much of a fortune teller, but here is what I see in my crystal ball.

First of all, I see Brenda Curry trying to keep six little Ricciardis in her hand. while she is waiting for her husband, Pete.

Sheila Rubinovitz is also busy keeping house, and she, of course, is married to Robbie.

Quite often I see Diana Bates' name in the newspaper for appearing in a Metropolitan Opera production.

I see many of my classmates as dental assistants. Roberta Rappaport is very busy helping and cleaning teeth for her father. Barbara Burke is working for a well-known dentist, and after work she hurries home to make supper for Tommy. In a rest home helping to keep the elderly people's teeth in good condition, I see Carol Cooperstein.

A girl who is on the go most of the time, helping others to walk and to enjoy life is Jacqueline Gordon, physical therapist.

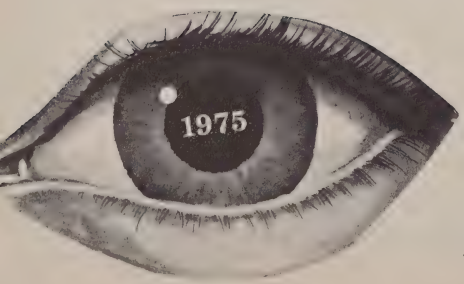
The class is also well represented in the teaching profession by two capable young women, Hildegarde Gillis and Linda Sloane. Hildegarde is kept busy correcting Latin and French tests, while Linda's time is consumed in trying to keep up with current affairs, as she is a history teacher.

In the business field, sitting on the lap of a big executive, I see the second "Susie McNamara," Patricia Prior.

I catch a glimpse of Maureen Mulhall relaxing, while listening to the patter of little feet on the floor.

Finally, I see one of my classmates out on a limb--a limb of a tree, that is. It is, of course, the famous ornithologist, Dana Mills.

I guess I've done enough star gazing, and if I don't hurry, I'll be late for my graduation!



To A Woodward Graduate

For her the world holds promise of bright years,
A future formed on training firm and sound,
And high ideals, respected where'er found;
But now her eyes are dimmed by misty tears
That come unheeded as she slowly nears
The group of smiling classmates gathered 'round
To welcome friends; with gladness they are crowned.
Her heart begins to smile, her vision clears.
Recalling scenes of years at Woodward spent,
She thrills to know that these have giv'n her much
That otherwise could not have been her own;
She learned, she laughed, in those dear halls that lent
To her their spirit and their guiding touch.
What sweet regard for her has Woodward shown!

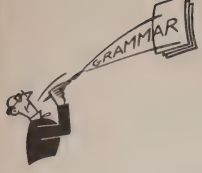
Anything but squash and sweet potatoes.	To go to a West Point or Annapolis prom.	To meet that certain someone.
Pickles and hot fudge sundaes.	To put a stick of dynamite in a gas tank.	To marry ideal male and have six children.
I HATE FOOD!!!	To "get even" with a certain teacher.	To develop my voice and be a town crier.
Olives!!!	To live on the moon, and compose a song ALLEGHENY EARTH.	To live and then die.
Lobster (Hodges' Style) and apples.	To go on a b---d trip with Roger Tory Peterson.	To graduate from college and then---.
Candy bars for breakfast.	To get Elvis Presley's autograph.	To learn how to drive.
Pizza and lime rickeys.	To put a bullfrog in Elvis Presley's guitar.	To be important and contribute something great to the world.
All kinds!!!	To go to Europe on a buying spree.	To get married.
Pizza and chocolate chip	To make the weeks shorter and the weekends longer.	I'll never tell!!!
Pickles and peppers.	To move Ohio closer to Massachusetts.	???

WHAT WOULD HAPPEN IF ---



The Seniors knew grammar?

All pizza places closed down?

Maureen went to Madrigal?

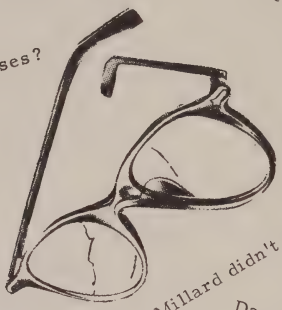
Pattie weren't hungry?

Roberta announced the hot dish?

Barbara didn't get a letter?

Cooper got a phone call every night?

None of the teachers wore glasses?



Jackie gained weight?

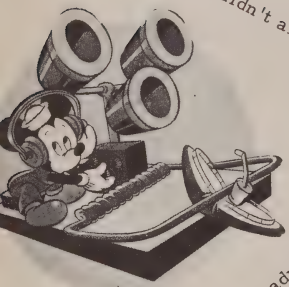
What would happen if?

Mrs. Millard didn't watch the clock?

The Senior Class didn't argue?

Hil found her glasses?

Dana forgot to make the pizza?



Linda couldn't count?

Ebenezer hadn't made a will?

Diana stood up straight?

Patty cleaned the papers out of her books?

Winnie Winkle got married?

Mrs. Leighton and Miss Hurlbert couldn't type?

Penny were late to first period class.

The Seniors were quiet?

Sheila wore her hair down?

Venus grew arms?

The Senior room were neat and clean?

Dennis weren't a Menace?

Dana didn't talk about birds?

Roberta didn't have anything to wear?

Diana had no boy friends?

Diana didn't have either a boy's ring or pin?

The Seniors had a place to park?

Barbara lost her job?

Elvis got laryngitis?

The little people in Peanuts grew up?

June 10 never came?

We didn't graduate?

It snowed all summer?

Miss Bacon didn't say "UMMM-Hum"?

Woodward had boys?

Linda worked this summer?

The School had a smoking room?

None of the Seniors had her license?

Hydrants were rubber?

Jackie's car started?

Cigarettes were outlawed?

The Gold Medal closed?

Maureen still had driving lessons?

Roberta got her license?

Brenda didn't dance or sing?

Cooper's slip didn't show?

Mr. Mac didn't know how to fix everything?

The Seniors got to class on time?

Sheila had no weekends to look forward to?

The Library were ever heated?

Hil modulated her voice?

GOOD-BYE TO WOODWARD

Our high school days will soon be just a memory;
We nevermore shall enter through your doors;
But rest assured, dear Woodward, your high ideals
Will follow us wherever we may go.

You will remain forever in our memories;
And to your standards great we'll e'er be true;
Our gay school days we've loved; but now the time has come,
Dear Woodward School, when we must say "Good-bye" to you.

The thought of you we'll always cherish in our hearts;
Your pillared doors, your ivy-covered walls,
Will always be to us an inspiration dear
To guide us on the winding path of life.

O, Woodward School, how sad for us to say "Good-bye"!
But we well know that in the years to come,
The precious guiding light of knowledge you will give
To more, to start them on the great highway of life.
